

ABSTRACT

A method and a mask have been optimized to reduce seam lines in replicated structures using lithographic processes. Multiple exposures and sweeps across a substrate using the mask results in the reduction of seam lines in the final developed photosensitive or micro formed structures.